I'm met with the State President last night. I am so grateful for kind, loving leaders. Leaders who depend on the Lord. He'll be having a disciplinary council Sunday. They want me to come in for a while at the end. I don't know if they'll ask me questions or if I'll just talk. I don't know what's going to happen and I'm nervous, but I know that whatever happens, it will be a blessing from the Lord. I have been prepared for this, the Lord is walking beside me and all will be well.

I feel so lost and so alone. The farther into this process we get the less able I feel to forgive. I am literally, physically ill and it just seems to be getting worse. I looked at Jim today and I couldn't feel any love. All of the things I loved about him, about us, were a lie.
I feel abused, worthless, unwanted, and unloved. Where do I find myself?
Where and how do I find my marriage again? My mom says I look too thin and is pushing me to eat, but I can't. All I've ever wanted was for people to love me. To love me. My father didn't love me enough to treat me well and my mother didn't love me enough to protect me. My own husband who built my self-esteem and my sense of security has utterly destroyed me. He didn't love me enough. What did I do?

Why is this the life that was chosen for me? Did I choose it? Did I tell Heavenly Father to pick me? Send me? Maybe I thought I had enough faith and enough love for all of these people in my life.
I don't feel very strong right now. I feel weak and useless. Everyone keeps telling me that none of this is my fault but I must accept my own culpability.
I should have listened more closely to the promptings of the spirit. I should have listened to all of Jim's cries for help. I should have centered my life on the spirit, the Lord. There were so many things that I knew that I should have been doing. Maybe it wouldn't have changed anything but it helps me to see where I was lacking and how I can change. I truly know that only with the help of the Savior can I truly love my husband again. I know when to let go. Whatever happens, I will stay close to my Savior. I will feel his love and accept his guidance. Whether it's Jim or not, I will love again.
Someone will love me and I will have eternity.

We know where we stand now. The High Council has voiced the Lord's decision and we have received confirmation that I was the right one. I'm struggling. He sees clearly now what he has stripped, and what he has lost. It's ironic that when he really cares about the blessings of his gift and family, he doesn't have them. Everyone has been very impressed with my willingness and ability to forgive. There are times I don't feel very forgiving. There are times the enormity of what he's done overwhelms me and I am hurt and angry. But anger is not of the Lord. Repentance is not of the Lord. I've decided to work on finding ways to be positive, energized and happy. I cannot have me. He will not destroy me with hopelessness and self-doubt. The Lord can heal this. I must work harder and understand the movement better. I must allow him to heal me. He is still a very good man. He is helpful and kind. He is very intelligent and very talented. Despite everything, I love him. I know his going to help me and by being strong and depending on the Lord, I can help him succeed.

Things to change: (Satan's lies)

1. Less Media
 - Media is essential to relaxation and entertainment 2. Heretics do not accept ~~truth~~
 - There is no difference between the two
3. Desire for education
 - Education is important but not essential
 - ~~now~~ now the Lord will bless and take care of me and the time will come 4. Spend more quality time with children
 - children can be scheduled into our day and don't need variation 5. Be more united in marriage
 - take care of yourself, just and keep some things for just you or you'll lose yourself
6. Forgiveness
 - people cannot change and some things are unforgivable 7. People watching
 - it's ok to look if it's not sexual, comparing is normal
8. He loves me
 - how could he do this to me if he really loves me. He doesn't think I'm good enough. He doesn't want me. He'd rather be with someone else 9. Nudity is ok if it's art
 - it's not pornography or dirty. It's different when it's artistic
10. Perfection
 - everyone else is doing better than I am. Nobody else's life is as hard as mine

I've felt really sad today. All of the books I've read and articles I've studied have said that you have to go through a period of mourning. And doesn't feel the same. I don't feel just sad. I feel depressed. I feel a huge sense of loss with no hope. I can't look back and say "He's gone but at least we had some good times." I feel like the good times were a lie. I feel so betrayed. He's here and there's a hope for eternity but the good times were a lie. It was a lie. He now has a long hard road in front of us because of the choices he's made. My sense of security is gone. I don't feel safe. It's taking everything I have to try out of his hands today. Maybe I feel like if I can do that, I'll be a little closer to trust again. But maybe I'm not ready to give that amount of trust yet.

The Good Times: (Jim's love for me)

1. When our one year anniversary came and I asked Jim for a fun surprise planned by him, he went all out. He got time off work for me without telling me, booked us our dream and pet friendly car, and bought tickets to fun class shows. He even packed my bag.
2. Before we were exposed he rented a u-haul trailer to pull my deer to Utah so we could ride together the whole way.
3. Whenever we have openly discussed our relationship and changes that need to be made, Jim has always given his all to make the changes that will make me happy.
4. He was always happiest when we could spend time alone together. He always planned and initiated date nights and trips alone.
5. He was there for me when I almost died with Soling. When I couldn't take care of Julie & myself for the first 24 hours, Jim stayed with him and fed him and loved with him. He wanted to love us and be there for us.
6. He complimented me. He told me I looked nice, opened doors for me, and noticed when I had worked hard. He always showed gratitude for me and the things I'd done.

true. It's going to hurt so much what I know it should hurt. He should be sad. I've been telling an affair. It hurt more when he said he didn't think he had enough to offer to make it worth it to give her up. It almost killed me when he said he didn't love me and I wasn't enough. There was a moment after he told me about the affair that my first thought was - his right, we have nothing left to fight for, he should leave.
I said I had the small prayer so much and had a heavenly vision for guide me. My hand had a pain in the palm as then I know it wasn't for the spirit without him. I don't worry. I don't even feel angry. I mostly just feel so hurt and so confused.

realized it was really difficult to want to be happy. I want really guidance on how to understand what I am next well as how to allow him to understand the pain and hurt he has caused me and how much I want what can only come from him. I believe the Lord simply wants me to take some time to think to have him tell me through his thoughts and feelings for the last few years. I hope that will help me to Have been meeting weekly with a therapist named Paul for about 5 weeks now. Today was a day we met and I felt like things were really well. I told him I felt like the next step in finding peace for me would be to forgive him. I told him I didn't expect that I would ever bring him to anything, but I want to eventually get to a place where I can feel pity and compassion instead of bitterness and anger. He was taken back by my feelings, a bit. I came to the realization that I actually feel toward her a pity. Outrage at how she treated me, at her manipulation with the goal of making me feel like that she felt worse than she did. I thought she felt worse than she did. I thought she had more pity for me than I had for her.

 I thought that at first I was about not just shutting those feelings down or even replacing them, but acknowledging them when they arise, replacing them and then turning away from them and toward what he put out into the world. So that's what I've been doing. I'm a little exhausted so I've been a bit of a hard worker, but I can start fresh tomorrow. I'm in a strange place right now where I'm not necessarily thinking about or upset about anything, but at the same time I feel like I'm more than once a day I just feel sad and the weight of everything just seems to be crushing all the time. I'm not sure if I want to do what that happens to myself, but I want to sleep. I haven't figured out yet if I should give in, or push through, but I think of the time I don't have a choice anyway because I have to much to do.

 I'm a single mom, I have to work, I have to raise my kids. I need to jump back in the house, fix my kids. I need to get out from my friends and see the good around me. I need to find more positive thoughts in my husband. I want to be a better mom for all that she already has.

Things have been going well, it often seems like that there are a lot of things that are going well, but then a person's character is not an easy thing to do, but I feel that so much of it is trying to do and need to do the rest of all these problems, no matter what caused that root is selfishness, selfishness causes and exacerbates so many other negative qualities and often so many years of reacting to the world has been a lot of conditioned reactions to it. It's an uphill battle to change that to learn to act and to choose as a conscious part of developing his character, from willingness to learn and dedication to change in his himself. He not giving he doesn't give and things will be done at these points, but I always come back around. I have been truly blessed every day since all of this.

Just that seems to be the way things are in this world. But I think I need to look on myself for the things that the world is not like. I really don't know

Well - we are working out of regular Dentrix today. We decided to have Ascend do a re-conversion tomorrow, but not include the insurance companies. There was too many insurances that we would have to clean up. It would be better for us just to have to re-enter them and start over. So all of our settings and everything that we set up yesterday me and Jackie will be here on Saturday redoing it.

This is going to sound crazy, but we don't actually have one. It was expiring and the landlord and I were going back-and-forth on different concessions that I wanted in a new lease, and our conversations stalled, and the lease expired so we actually don't have one!

On a Saturday it's hard to know what to do for him since we can't even call in pain meds. I guess we could call in amoxicillin 500 mg number 21 one capsule by mouth three times daily until gone with no refills. Can you do that?

Hey Doc, Mark Brooker won't be here until 11 o'clock tomorrow. I had Katie call Jill to schedule his Sedation case last week, and she left a message for Jill, but never followed up. I called Jill to confirm today and she said she never received the message, so they have been trying all day to move their schedule to accommodate us. So Mark will be from 11 until three and then Brianna will be from 3 to 415 for her wisdom teeth removal.

Also, I forgot to talk to you earlier about the Melissa Ingram. She said the burning started after some things on her lip, was it the etch? She called her PCP and they want to know what it was so they can look it up. She said she doesn't have herpes, and the blisters only happened after some thing fell on her lap, and it started burning.

It's a phosphoric acid gel. I did not see any get on her lip, but it's possible that dead. However, that gel gets on patient's lips and gums all the time and does not cause blistering like that. It's not herpes like she's thinking about, but I do believe it's a viral infection. We see that same viral infection often when patients have something traumatic done at the dentist, and then the virus appears afterward. I suppose it could be a localized reaction to the gel but I've never heard of that before.

Sadly, no answers. Violently nauseous with a really bad headache this morning. As soon as I woke up and went in, she just started vomiting and vomiting and then just dry heaving over and over. It's really awful. I haven't had a chance to talk to the doctors or nurses yet to find out what her vitals were like over the night.

All Of the ordered tests have been completed and are normal. Haven't had a chance to talk to the doctor yet this morning to find out what the next steps are. They kept her last night to monitor her blood pressure mostly, but I don't know how we are going to be able to manage. What's going on with her... She has literally only eaten one cracker in three days, and she threw that up.

Going ok. She had a huge crash last night, and the doctors had a hard time reviving her again, but today is a lot better. I'm hoping they will let her come home tomorrow. Her brother is driving in town today, so he and my sister-in-law can help out with my kids tomorrow, and I should be able to work.

Hey Doc, sorry to bother you. I know you have a lot going on. My roommate has a really really bad toothache, she said it's eight out of 10 pain wise. She has Medicaid and is going to try and get into an office that takes her insurance tomorrow, but is there anyway you might be able to call in even just a couple pain meds for me to get her through the night and tomorrow morning?

I would love to! But they just changed the law like last week)or at least that's when I found out about it). I'm not allowed to call in any pain meds for any patients that I have not physically seen face-to-face. Actually, you can't really call in anything anymore, but you can send it in electronically. But you're not even allowed to do that unless you have had an examination with a patient face-to-face. Best thing I can recommend is 800 mg of ibuprofen, 500 mg of Tylenol, and 10 mg of marijuana gummy's all at the same time. I'm so sorry.
