Good Evening Ms. Roberts.

You can provide a separate subpoena for records, with an authorization signed by your client who is also the account holder, but the records that would be produced are not going to be reproductions of the records previously provided to law enforcement as we are bound by non-disclosure for those requests.

I conferred with a few colleagues and what we might require to release the information provided previously to LEA is an order from the judge that specifically mandates that we break non-disclosure and reproduce the records that originally were sent to the LEA in regards to the legal process they submitted.

On Monday I can confirm with my supervisor and our legal counsel what would be required definitively for us to release a reproduction of records and at that point when I have more info I will reach out.

Thank you.
