Nhi Aronheim may stand at just four feet, nine inches tall—but she has built a reputation as a true giant in negotiation and conflict resolution.

If you are looking for someone to advocate for your side, Nhi is not the right mediator. But if you want a skilled neutral who listens deeply, communicates effectively, and guides parties toward practical, lasting solutions, she is exactly who you want at the table. With over 1,500 hours of hands-on mediation experience conducting mediations (excluding administrative time), she helps clients resolve disputes efficiently and avoid the cost and stress of going to court.

A former child refugee from Vietnam, Nhi's journey has been featured in publications including Kentucky Women: Two Centuries of Indomitable Spirit and Vision, Colorado Public Radio, The Denver Post, and Westword. Her life experience gives her a deep understanding that conflict is universal—and that resolution is always possible.

Nhi brings decades of real-world experience to her mediation practice. She has successfully helped parties resolve disputes involving real estate, landlord-tenant matters, business conflicts, financial disagreements, small claims, insurance, property damage, personal injury, and family situations. She previously worked as a consultant with Lucent Technologies and spent over sixteen years in the mortgage industry, where she regularly handled complex negotiations. Nhi holds a B.S. in Mathematics from Centre College and an M.S. in Telecommunications Engineering from University of Colorado Boulder. She is also the author of Soles of a Survivor. At her core, Nhi is passionate about helping people move forward—with clarity, dignity, and resolution.
